Doctoral research study, SDA Bocconi School of Management

Thank you for taking part in this training programme.

The training materials used in this programme were designed with the assistance of artificial intelligence, as part of a doctoral research project at SDA Bocconi School of Management, supervised by Professor Emanuele Borgonovo.

About the research

This study examines how AI-assisted design affects the quality of finance training for working professionals, how people experience gamified simulation, and what makes such training effective and trustworthy.

What you are being asked to do

During this four-day programme you may complete four short activities: a brief questionnaire at the start of Day 1, a short reflection at the end of each day (about five minutes), and a final evaluation at the end of Day 4 (about ten minutes).

Your responses are anonymous

- No name, employee number, email address, or any other identifying information is collected at any point
- You do not log in, and these forms are completely separate from the FinPlay training platform
- Your responses cannot be linked to you, to each other, or to anything you do in the training
- Your employer will never see individual responses, because no individual responses exist to see

Your choice is free

Taking part in the research is entirely voluntary and separate from your attendance at the training, which your employer arranged. Choosing not to take part has no effect whatsoever on your training experience and no employment consequence of any kind.

You may stop at any time simply by not completing a later activity. Because responses carry no identifiers, a submitted response cannot afterwards be found and withdrawn.
